

Karelia: between Lake Onega and the White Sea

Russian Karelia: a beautiful journey in the middle of the nature and the historical artifacts! Karelia extends from the White Sea coast to the Gulf of Finland. The largest lakes of Europe are situated in Karelia: Lake Ladoga and Lake Onega. The Karelian Isthmus is located between the Gulf of Finland and Lake Ladoga. The large territory of this historical region is divided today between Finland and Russia and the rich traditions of its native people, the Karelians, who inhabited these dense forests and frost plains long before the coming of the first Scandinavian colonists, exerts a huge influence on the Finnish and Russian cultures. Discover the beautiful nature of the great Russian North and explore the islands on Lake Onega and the White Sea traveling with Russian Tour! We offer a wide selection of package holidays to Karelia, Lake Onega and the islands of the White Sea including a full visit programme and the support of an English-speaking guide; for questions and bookings, please contact us

Kizhi, the Pearl of Karelia

Island located on Lake Onega, Republic of Karelia (Medvezhegorsk District), Russia. It is characterized by a set of wooden churches, chapels and houses. It is one of the most famous tourist destinations in Russia and also an UNESCO World Heritage Site. It is surrounded by 5,000 other islands, many of which are extremely small, some of only 2 meters square, others reaching 35 km square. Kizhi is an ancient settlement that includes more than 100 villages from the XVI century. The island was declared a World Heritage Site for its unique architectural complexes. The architectural gem of the island is the Church of the Transfiguration (1714) with its 22 domes and a Baroque iconostasis. The nearby Intercession Church with 9 domes was built in 1764, with a bell tower added in 1874. The most astonishing feature of these structures is the fact that they were built without nails or other metal reinforcements; all connections are made of wood.

Valaam, on Lake Onega

Valaam is an island in the northern part of Lake Ladoga and is its largest island. On the island there is the town of Valaam, included in the town of Sortavala, and the Monastery of Valaam, a monument of Russian architecture. The island is a popular tourist destination. There are two inland lakes, with a deeply indented coastline; their total area is 100 hectares, with interconnected canals, and a vast network of drainage canals (XIX century).

Solovki, on the White Sea

Since 1974 the islands have been a natural reserve. They are an archipelago on the White Sea, in the Northwestern Federal District of Russia. They are situated 160 km from the Arctic Circle, 250 km from the Finnish border, 700 km from St. Petersburg, and 1200 km from Moscow. In 1992 Solovki became an UNESCO World Heritage Site "as an outstanding complex, representing an apogee of the Russian Orthodox monastic enterprise, and endurance in a hostile environment". The archipelago, which is the largest archipelago of the Sea White, consists of six main islands and more than a hundred small islands, islets and rocks.
